Col. R. H. Montgomery
Looks for Manufacturer to Be Farmer's Ally.

PICKS BARUCH CHIEF

Republicans and Democrats
Declared 'Total Loss' in Elections.

WAR BOARD HAS REUNION

Speakers Agree Next Conflict
Will Conscript Money and Industry.

Believing that both old parties, in the elections this year and two years ago, proved themselves a "total loss," Col. Robert H. Montgomery advocated yesterday a new alignment with conservatives on one side and radicals on the other. He suggested that Bernard M. Baruch would be a good man to go out and bring farmers and manufacturers into their natural alliance as the nucleus of a conservative party.

Col. Montgomery, who was on the price fixing commission during the war and helped later to reorganize the Shipping Board as comptroller under Chairman Lasker, was one of the speakers at the annual meeting of the War Industries Board Association in the Waldorf-Astoria. This is a reunion of the men who under the chairmanship of Mr. Baruch coordinated American industry in war time.

Voters Are Disatisfied.

"Two years ago," Col. Montgomery said, "I gave $1,000 to the Republican national campaign and I've been kicking myself ever since. To-day a great many voters are disatisfied with those in power who are not delivering the goods. Why shouldn't we take advantage of this and draw the line between those who are radical and those who are not radical? I think the manufacturers of the country have a natural ally in the farmer. They should work together. An alliance of the farmer and the radical is illogical. Why not send Mr. Baruch out to effect an alliance between farmers and manufacturers? We'd have there the nucleus of a fine political party. Call it the conservative party, and I think the chief here would make a fine leader for it."

As an illustration of how politics works, Col. Montgomery said that last year he ordered that the force of 3,200 Shipping Board employees be reduced one half by the following Monday, otherwise every second name would be erased. The cutting was done on time and, said the Colonel, the 1,600 did better work than the 3,200 had done.

Changed Their Politics.

"They told me I could go as far as I liked with the 1,600 to be dropped," he added, "because they were all Democrats put in there by Joe Tumulty. I thought I was doing a fine piece of work for the Republican party, but I found that most of those dismissed had suddenly become Republicans, and Senators and Representatives by the dozen were spending time in the offices of the Shipping Board. If they had put in that time in the Capitol attending to the country's business instead of looking after $1,200 a year clerks the country would have been better off."

The speakers were agreed that if there is ever another war industry and money as well as soldiers should be conscripted at the start.

Dwelling on the need of standardization J. Leonard Replogie, president of the Replogie Steel Company, said that the railroads have spent "hundreds of millions" and his own company has made "many millions" unnecessarily by the failure of the roads to adopt a uniform type of car, particularly a coal car. Noting that the quartermasters of the Idaho potato crop could not be shipped, he attributes much of the car shortage to lack of standardization.

LANE SAYS NATION ESCAPED ANARCHY

looked as if this were Harding's motto until Hoover's appointment. Hoover will be the man to whom the country will look for some guidance along progressive lines, and the country will expect too much, more than any man can deliver.

PASADENA, 22 (February, 1921). Poor Harding! He will suffer the politicians, I fear, till they undo him.

The Germans seem to have recovered their audacity. They should have been driven into their own land and then some. I am not for revenge nor for their paralyzing, but just reparation they should pay. Perhaps things have been botched, I do not trust Briand. I'd trust Hoover to get all they could pay, and he's the only one I know who could be just and at the same time sensible in method, but he can't be used where he should be used.

Right now the call in national affairs of every kind is for the long view; we have use for the men who can see this nation in its relation to other nations, next year and next generation, and for men in business who can think in terms of 1922 and 1923, and 1945. That's what really big business can do—hold its breath under water and watch the waves.

Hoover and Harding.

PASADENA, March 5 (1921). If Hoover can work with Harding, or the latter with him, all will be well. But I fear the politicians—especially [those] ambitious for a great political machine. The country will be generous for a time to Harding. . . . But it will turn against him with anger unbounded if he turns the country over to the men who want office and the men who want privilege and favor. The politicians and the profiteers may be his undoing. I hope not!

MORGAN HILL, [March] (1921).

Of course the inauguration business was commonplace. That is Ohio statesmanship, somehow. But good may come of it. Damn all your politics and partisanship! Humbug—twaddle—fiddle-dee-dee, made for lazy louts who want jobs and bosses who want power. Well, we are out now for a long time, and we might as well forget bitterness, or rather, submerge it in the bigger call of the nation.

R. R. TRAIN, Minnesota, April 22. I look at the paper and see "Harding" at the top of every column. Then I think of W. W. looking at the paper and seeing the same headlines. Oh, what unhappiness! Not all the devices of Tumulty for keeping alive illusions of grandeur could offset those headlines. Ungrateful world! Understanding world!

Brass Tacks and Money.

TO ROBERT LANSING—

ROCHESTER, Minn., May 3 (1921). My dear Lansing: Really, I think Harding is doing well, or rather that the whole Administration is being supported well by the country. Oh, these Republicans have the art of governing, and we do so much better at talking! No one knows just what his foreign policy is, but something will work through that will satisfy a very tired people. There seem to be comparatively few out of work now. We are not out of the woods yet. But the Lord will take care of them. He may even keep Johnson from bolting Harding. They will temporize through; that's my guess.

Good English the people don't know. Ideality they have had enough of for a time. They just want to get down to brass tacks and make some money, so that the Mrs. can have more new dresses. I do earnestly wish them luck. God gave us the great day and you and I, anyway, are not ashamed of the parts we played. In fact, the party loomed pretty large those days—the whole country breathed lungfuls and felt heroic. We shall not look upon such another time nor act for a people so nobly inspired.

ROCHESTER, Minn., May 2, 1921.

The country seems to be liking Harding and his Cabinet more and more. They do have a faculty for getting things done, those Republicans, and they are subjected to so little criticism. It is really good to see them do their work and get away with things so neatly.

The twelfth installment of Mr. Lane's letters will appear in THE NEW YORK HERALD to-morrow.
